Briefing of the project

Introduction

Overview:

Project: Design Logo, Sauce Label Sticker for Sachets of Singapore Gift Package Design

Singaporeans are obsessed with food. We can expound ceaselessly on where to find the best bak chor mee (minced meat noodles) and will queue for hours for a good yong tau foo (surimi-stuffed tofu and vegetables). Perhaps because most of us are descendants of immigrants thrust into an artificial construct of a nation, or maybe because we live in a country that is constantly renewing and rebuilding, one of the few tangible things that connects us to the past and our cultural identity is food.

There are many facets of Singaporean cuisine: Malay, Chinese, Indian, Eurasian (a fusion of European and Asian dishes and ingredients) Peranakan (combining Chinese and Malay food traditions), and catch-all Western, which usually means old-school Hainanese-style British food—a local version of Western food adapted by chefs from the southern Chinese province of Hainan, who worked in British restaurants or households.

Singapore is a melting pot of cuisines, incorporating a rich heritage of food dishes consisting of Chinese, Indian, Malaysian and Indonesian influences and generations of food heritage and culinary creations pushed the envelope on Singaporean cuisine. “Taste of Singapore” has been created to celebrate Singapore flavours and the rich depth of our culinary past and future from celebrity chefs and michelin star’s hawker masters in the form of a souvenir or gift for tourists or local alike to bring back home for their family and friends.

Description of the project

2. Choose and design Sauce Label Sticker for THREE (3) different Singaporean Dishes sachets
